Origins

In the late 1800's Swansea had only "one room" buildings for grammar schools and no high school. By 1900 transportation had improved, so students were attending high school in Warren or Fall River. The town paid twenty-five dollars for each student in these schools.

Because of the expense, talk of building a school was heard more and more. In 1916 the town purchased the land where the Junior High now stands. Mrs. Frank S. Stevens wanted to donate the money to build a high school, but the town was reluctant to accept her large proposal.

Out of lack of funds and need of a high school, the town finally accepted Mrs. Stevens' gift on June 18, 1926. She also donated the land from the dam to the old football field, equipped the entire school building and opened a trust fund for two-hundred thousand dollars. These were all donated under the following conditions: that the land be used only for school or park purposes, the trust fund be used by the school only, and the high school be named in memory of her father, Joseph Case.

In September of 1926 the cornerstone was laid. It contained such items as the annual report of 1925, newspapers and coins of the day, portraits, and a list of town officers.

The dedication took place on September 1, 1927. Mr. Frank C. Chace became the first principal and in 1929 Miss Helen A. Reagan became assistant principal. Then, in 1945 Miss Reagan became principal.

The first yearbook came out in 1945, entitled THE RECORD BOOK. It held that name for a few years, until the students, dissatisfied with such a conventional name, changed it. They decided on THE CHIEF, in honor of Swansea's Indian heritage. The name remains today as a remembrance of our history.

Dedication

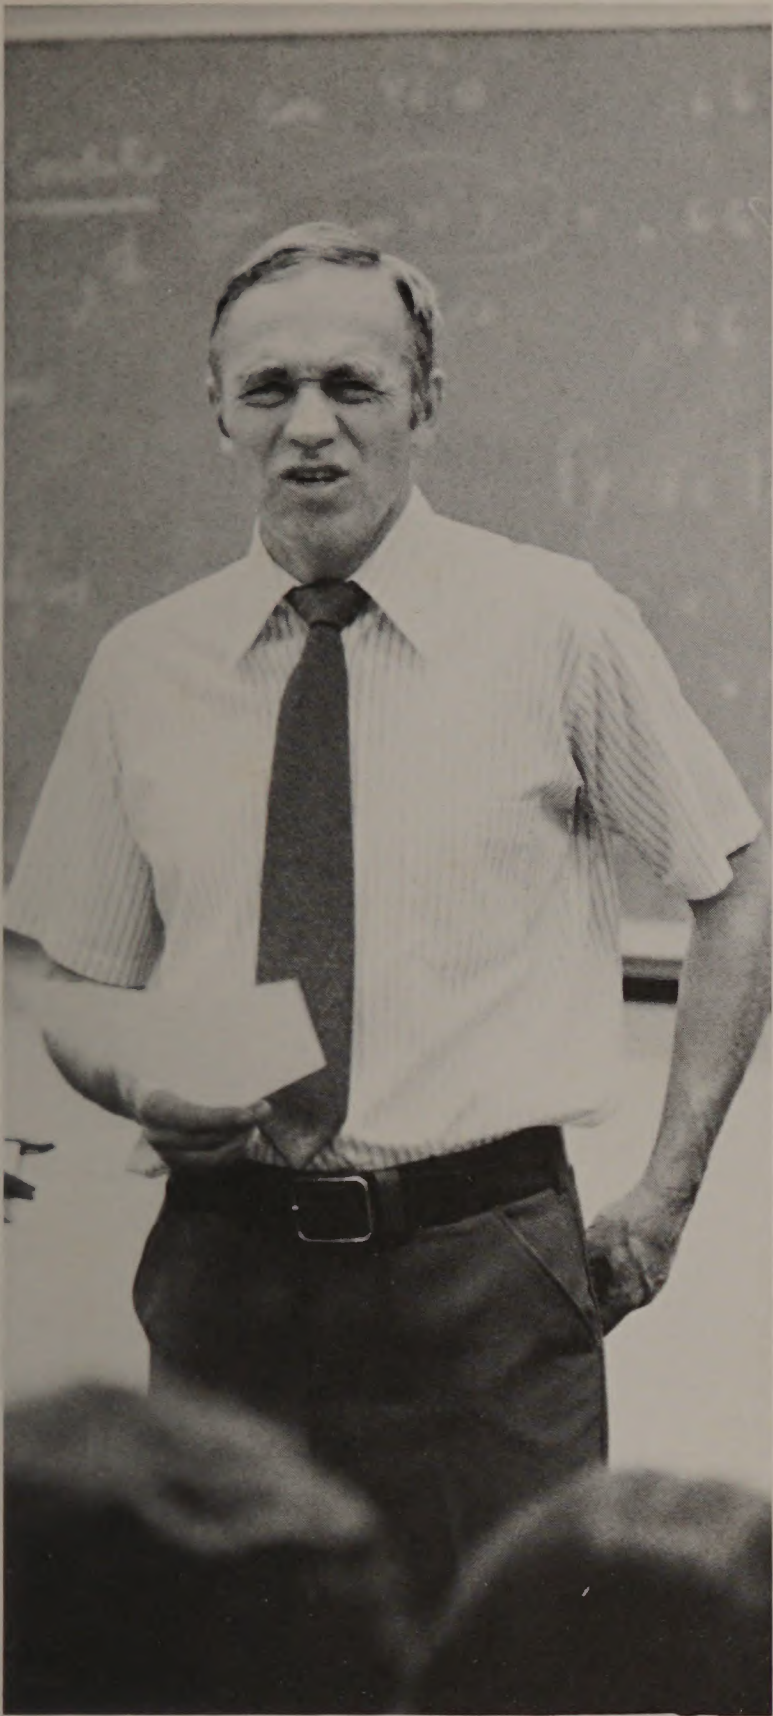

A dedication is a demonstration of the esteem in which we hold a person. This year, two men were chosen, who by both their teaching and friendship, have influenced our lives.

Mr. Craig Mulligan, a math teacher and friend to many, has been teaching at Case since 1959. His enjoyment of his work is infectious. With his everpresent overhead projector and "trusty" Magic Markers, he makes algebra come alive.

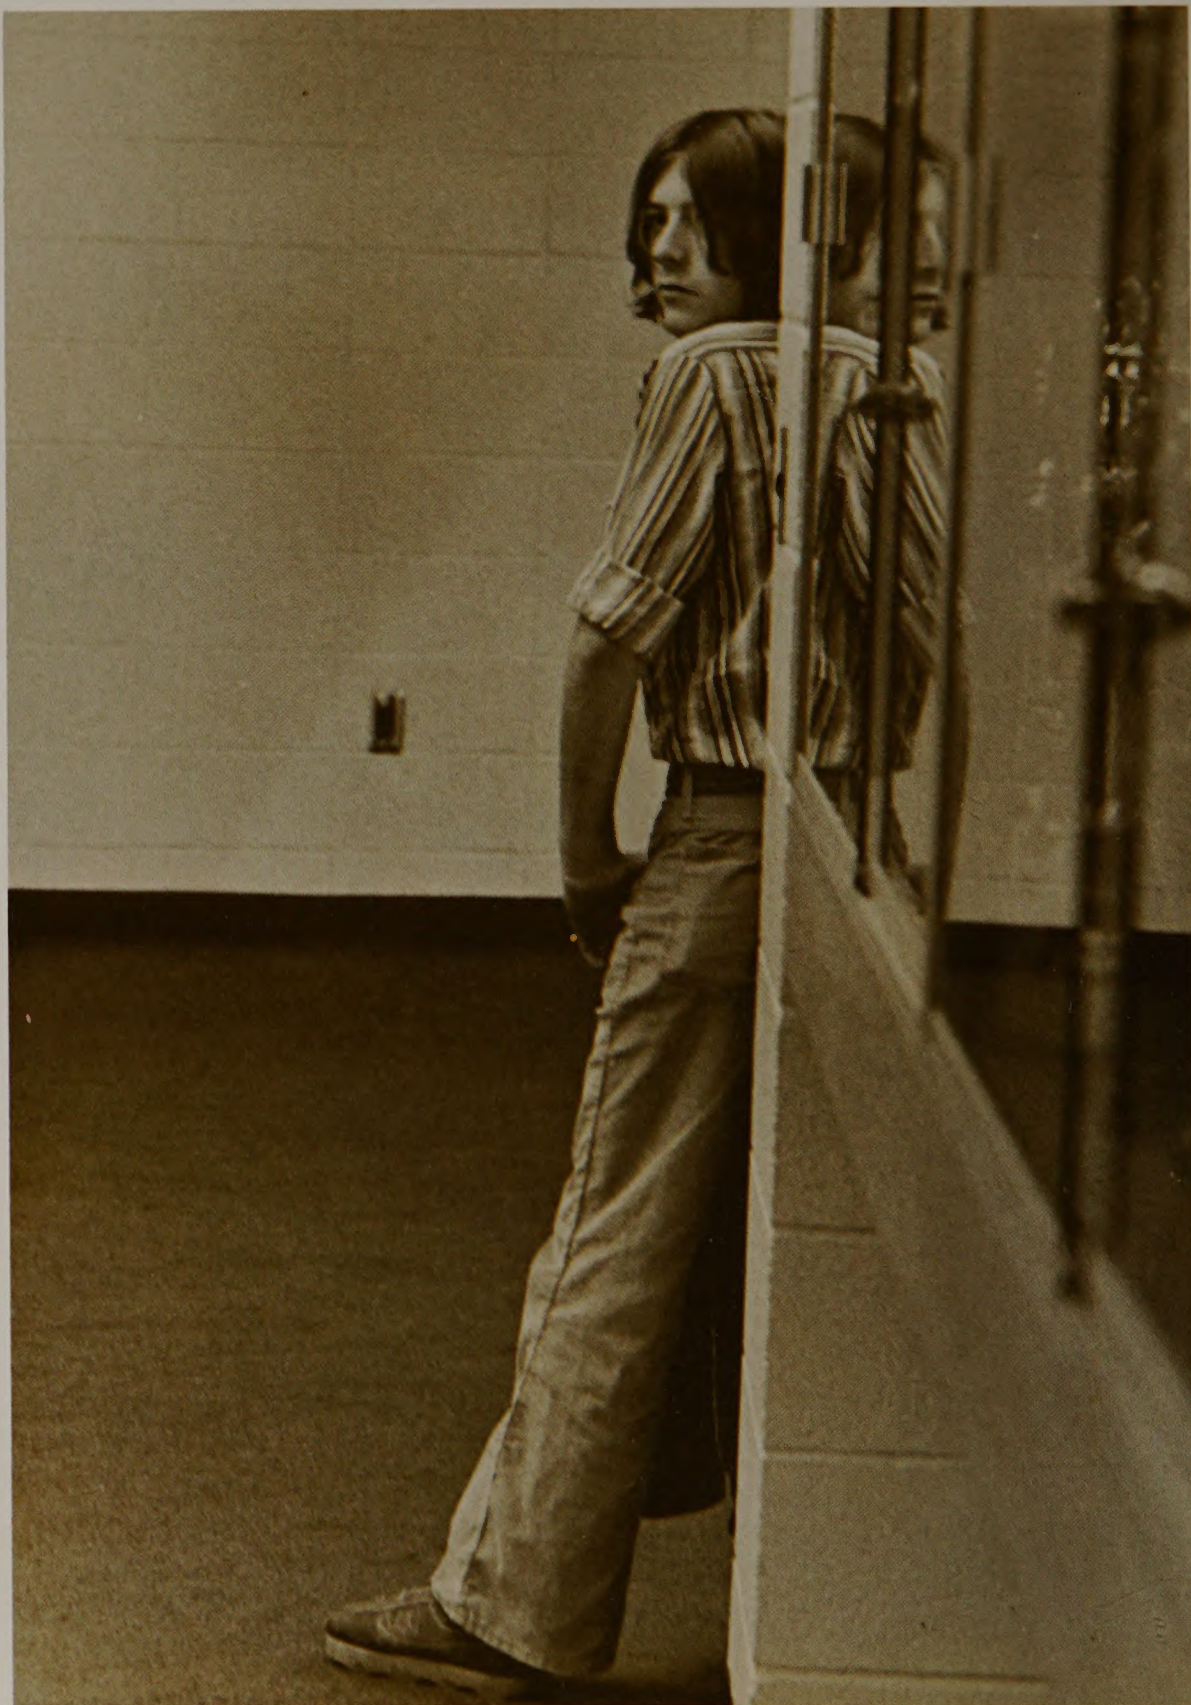

Though Mr. Jeffrey Mascena has only been teaching here since 1975, his humor and friendliness make him popular with his students. Mr. Mascena also contributes to our after-school life by building equipment for science projects and scenery for plays.

To these men who have given us so much knowledge and laughter, we give our thanks.

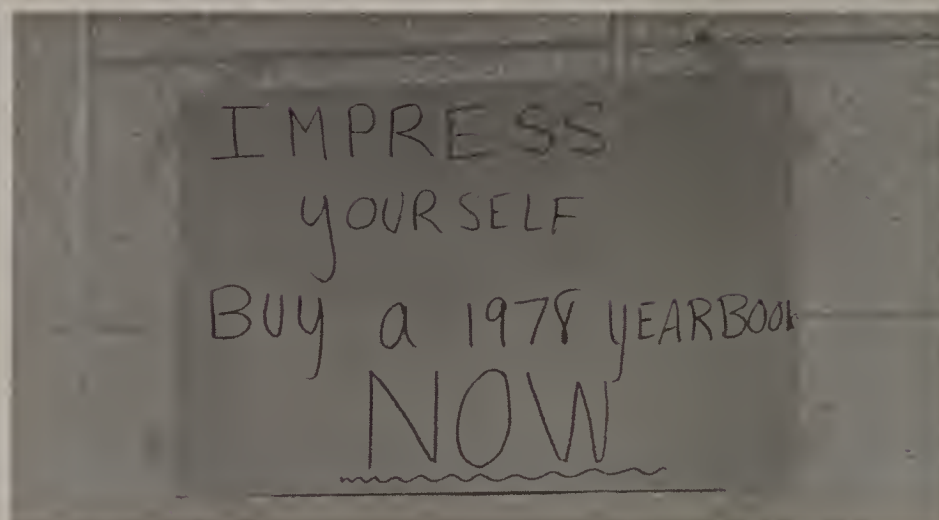

It passed so swiftly . . .
the days melted together
like waves on the water, seemingly without beginning or end.

It was just another year,
but a once in a lifetime.

We tried to establish ourselves
as individuals,
unique in our purpose
and ability.

Yet we were chanelled along
as one body,
seniors, bound for an unknown future, searching for an island in the fog.

Our unity was evident . . .
we shared similar goals
and emotions,
the anticipation and apprehension
of an uncertain future,

and the determination to make decisions
which would lend order
to our lives.

Though the familiar facets of our lives
will fade away,
one day,
when we stop to reflect on the past,
it will all gain
a meaning.

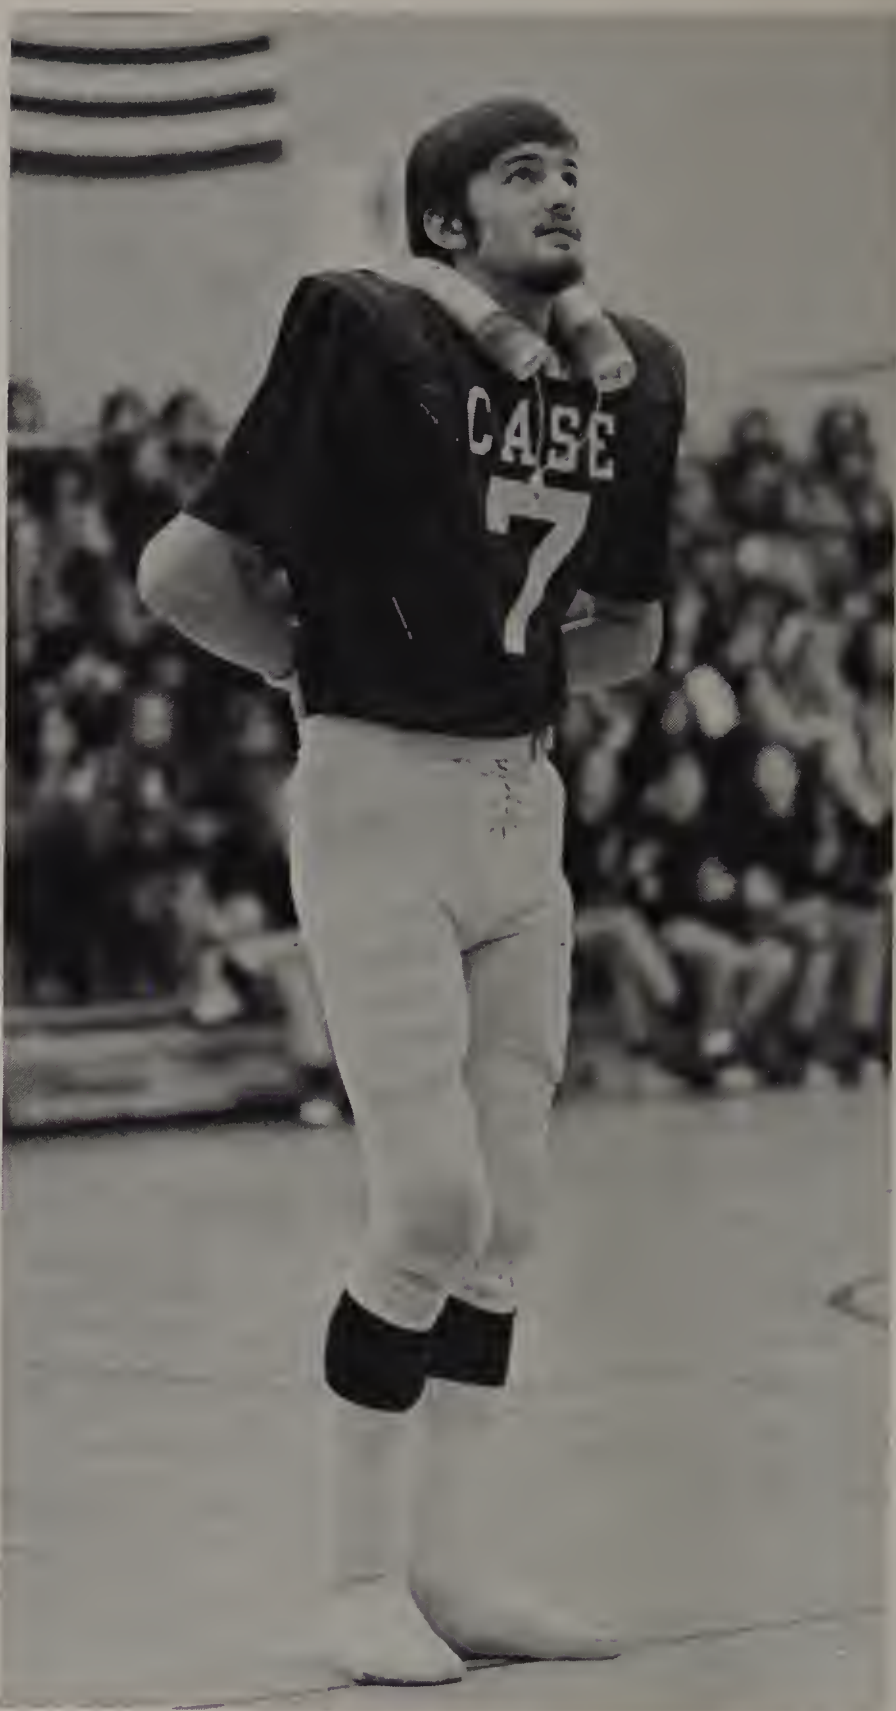

Where's Your Spirit?

Spirit week is a time when class officers become almost frenzied in their efforts to prove that their class has the most spirit. This year, the seniors came through with the wildest hats, the cutest baby dolls, and the most lavishly decorated hall. Students and teachers got caught up in the craziness that climaxed in the Pep rally. The most memorable events were Colleen Webb in green wig and sneakers as Somerset's Homecoming Queen and Mr. Mulvey's lecture on 'How to shave your football helmet'

Another senior success was the Homecoming Dance. Chosen as Homecoming Queen and Escort were Lisa Duclos and Bobby Heron. The court consisted of Lori Holmes and Escort Tim Hazel and Lori Robertshaw and her Escort Jeff Pollard.

Of course, all this activity was leading up to much-awaited Thanksgiving Day game between Case and our rival, Somerset High. On a rainy Thursday that dampened spirits as well as the field, Case gridgers fought hard but failed to bring the coveted trophy home. The final score was 21-6 Somerset.

Shakespeare A La Marcello

With the trumpet fanfare, the stage was transformed into the court of Queen Elizabeth I, and months of rehearsing came to a climax in "Romeo and Juliet".

The show with a cast and crew of almost 200, was a multi-media extravaganza. The acting was supplemented with films and live and recorded music. An authentic Renaissance dance, the Mouresca, was also performed.

Played to full houses on December 3rd and 4th, "Romeo and Juliet" had to run a third time on December 10th to accomodate the many people who had been turned away because of lack of seating. The appreciative audiences and standing ovations were the reward for excellent performances. Featured leads were: Kevin Luongo as Romeo, Laura Siner as Juliet, Renee Canuel as the nurse, Michael Farias as Mercutio, David Leite as Lord Capulet, and Cheryl Estrella as Lady Capulet.

Pagentry

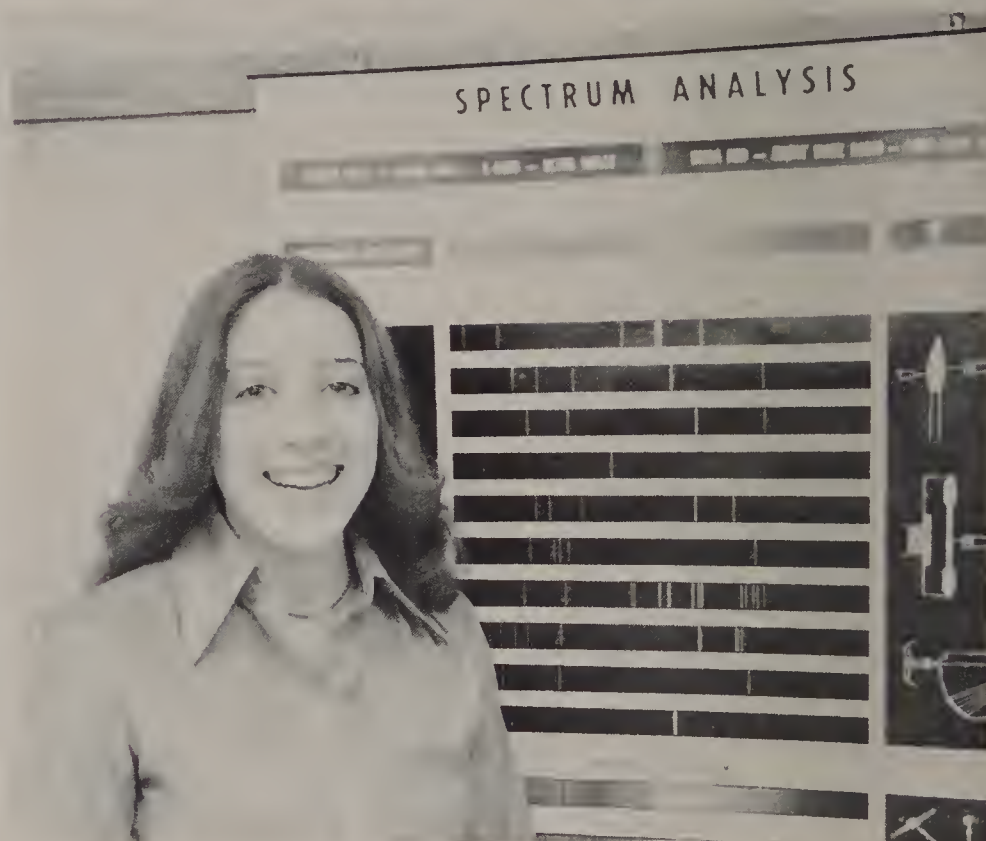

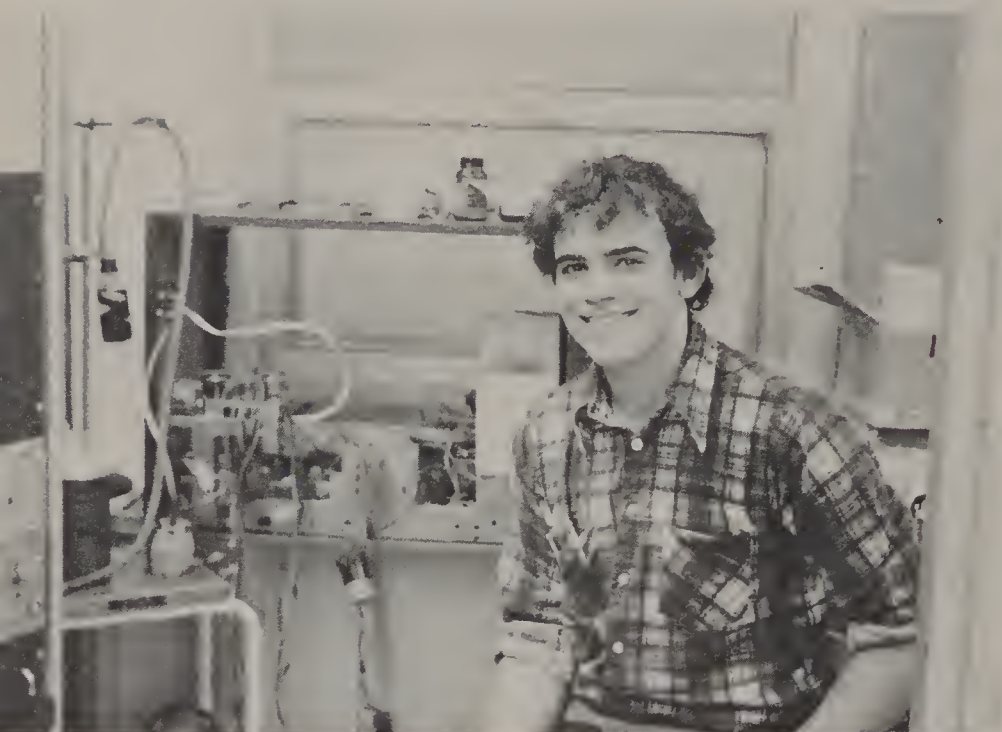

Case High School was represented by two candidates in the Somerset Junior Miss Pageant this year. Donna Doane and Sherry Clarke. For the second year in a row, the crown went to a Case student, Donna Doane! Vale-dictorian of her class, Donna was crowned by the vale-dictorian of the class of 1977, Robin Souza.

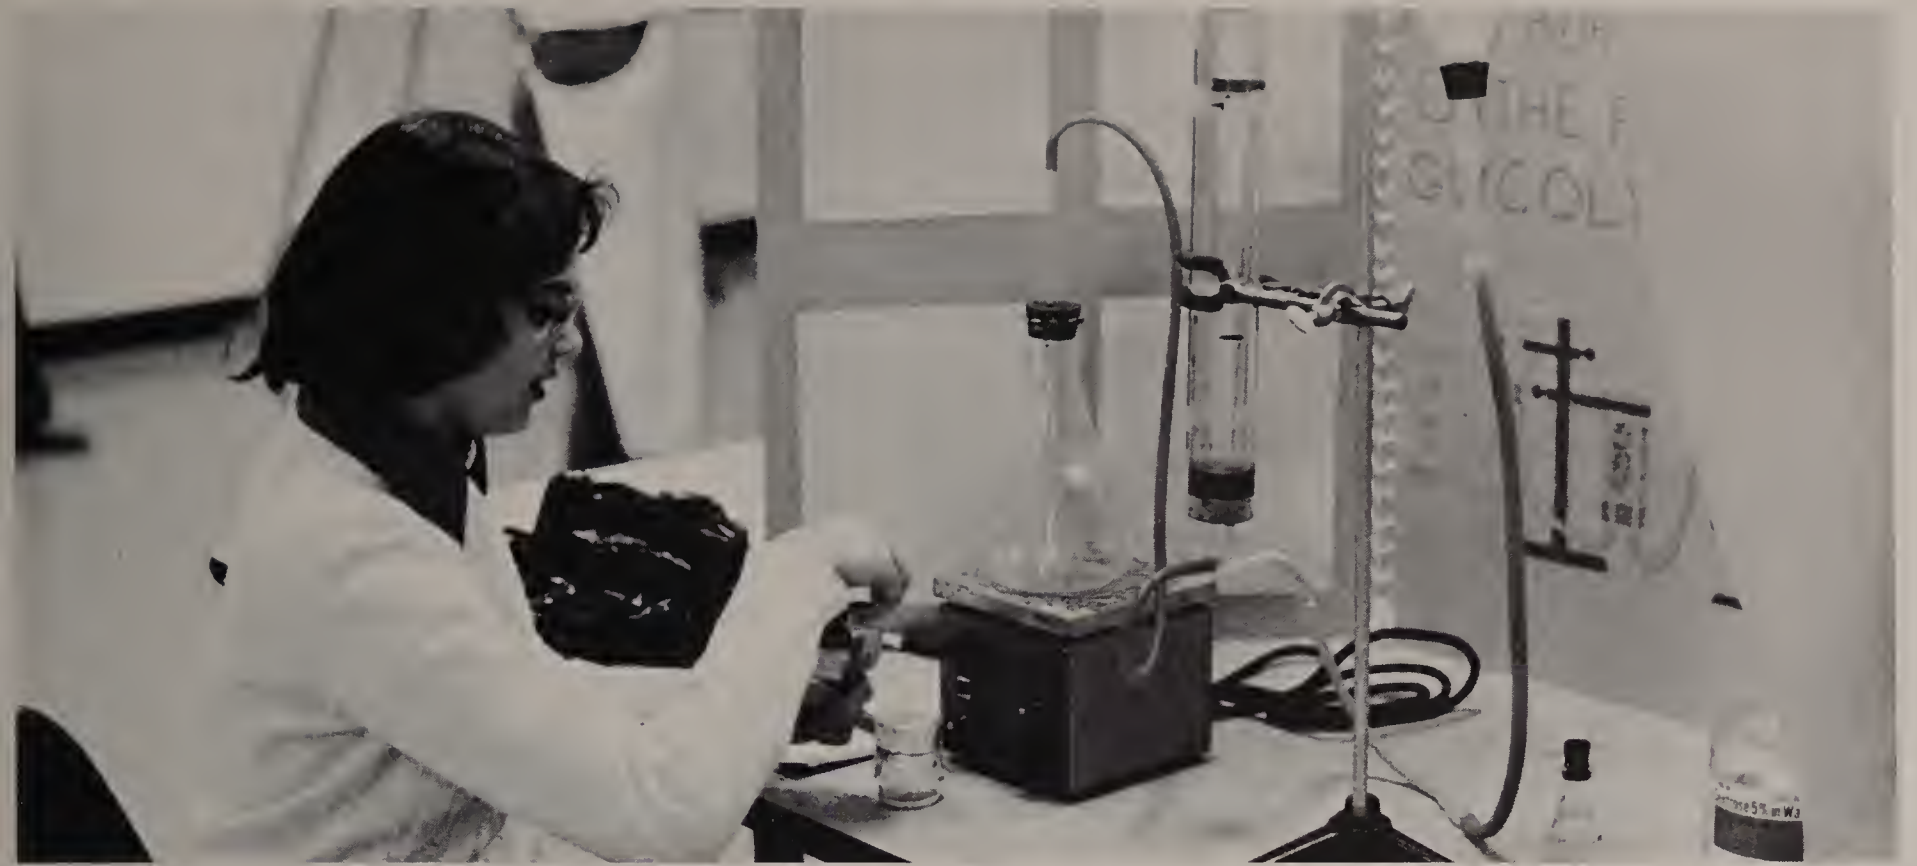

In The Pursuit Of Knowledge

Case's third year of participation in the Massachusetts Regional Science Fair was a memorable one. Many of Case's students won prizes and went on to the State Science Fair in Boston.

Case prize winners were: first place: Don Flynn, second place: Priscilla Hayden, third place: Debbie Reiser.

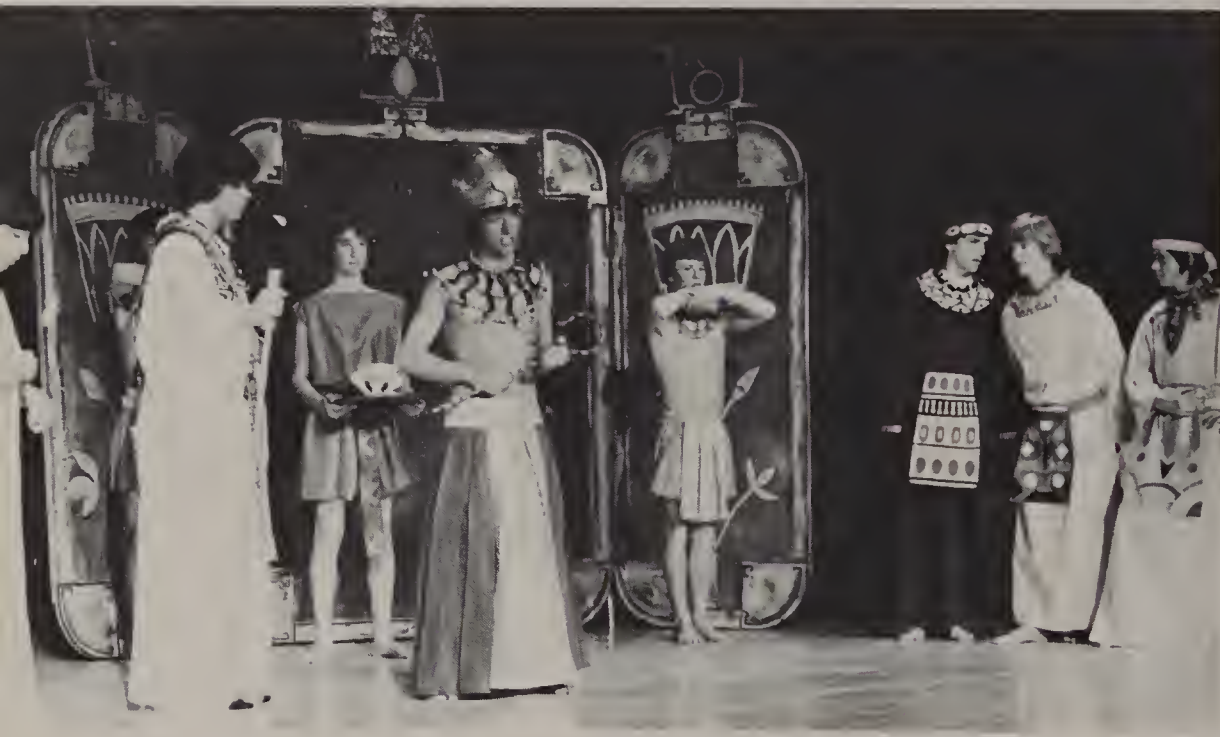

Tutmania

While the exhibit of "The Treasures of King Tut" was touring the nation, the Drama Club was in rehearsal for "The Lost Queen of Egypt", the love story of the boy king and his wife, Ankhsenamen. The play was adapted by Mr. Thomas Marcello for performance at the Massachusetts Regional Drama Festival held on March 4th at Bishop Connolly High School. The dazzling costumes, props and sets, which were highlighted by recorded music and slides of the ancient treasures projected behind the actors, earned Case a special award for technical excellence. This was the first time in the 47 year history of the festival that this award was given.

The three leads, Bobby Heron as King Tutankhamen, Cheryl Estrella as Ankhsenamen, and Dave Leite as the High Priest Ay, were chosen as members of the All-Star cast for their exceptional performances.

The Roar Of The Greasepaint, Etc.

CARNIVAL!, the Case High Theatre Company's spring musical, was one of the highlights of the year. Under the expert direction of Thomas Marcello and helpful assistance from Mr. H. James LaFlame, Ms. Chris Stanton, Kathy Barry, and Anne Pettine, the stage was once again filled to the gills with students of Case High singing, dancing, and doing daring gymnastic feats.

The lead role was double-casted with Nancy Cusick and Lori Robertshaw playing the part of Lili. However, Lori was unable to perform because of illness. Other leads were: Paul played by David Gonsalves, Marco played by Dave Leite, and Rosalie played alternately by Sue Botelho and Karen Silveira.

Opposite- Upper Right: Dave Leite as Marco astonishes Kerri Lyons with his magic. Lower Right: Carrot-top and Horrible Henry try to cheer up Lili (Nancy Cusick). The puppets were an important part of the show. Upper Left: An exultant Lili (Nancy Cusick) raises her voice in song with a little help from the roustabouts. Below: The Grand Imperial Cirque de Paris brought frenzied applause from the audience. This Page- Top: Sue Botelho as Rosalie leads the Carnival troupes in "Direct from Vienna". Upper Right: Schlegel (Tim Hazel) and Rosalie (Karen Silveira) discuss Marco's faults over a couple of drinks. Lower Right: The Roustabouts put on a show for Lili. Left: David Gonsalves as the embittered Paul, brought tears to the audience's eyes with "Everybody Likes You".

Puttin' On The Ritz

The prom, being the social event of the year, was everything everyone expected it to be. The promgoers feasted on Roast Prime Rib of Beef at the Chateau de Ville in Warwick. Dancing commenced at eight o'clock and continued until the magical hour of twelve. The theme of the prom was Seals and Crofts' "We May Never Pass This Way Again". It was a special night to be remembered by all who attended.

Chosen as Prom Queen was Kim Teller. Her court consisted of Melissa MacDonald, Lisa Duclos, Linda Pettine, and Lori Robertshaw.

Parties And Solemnities

The Senior Banquet, the final class function before graduation, was held on Wednesday, May 30 at the Hawthorne Country Club. The class dined and danced before the more solemn occasion of Class Night.

Class Night was held on the Thursday before graduation. On this night, awards and scholarships were presented. The Daisy Chain, consisting of ten Junior girls, led the class into the auditorium, in practice for the procession on Sunday.

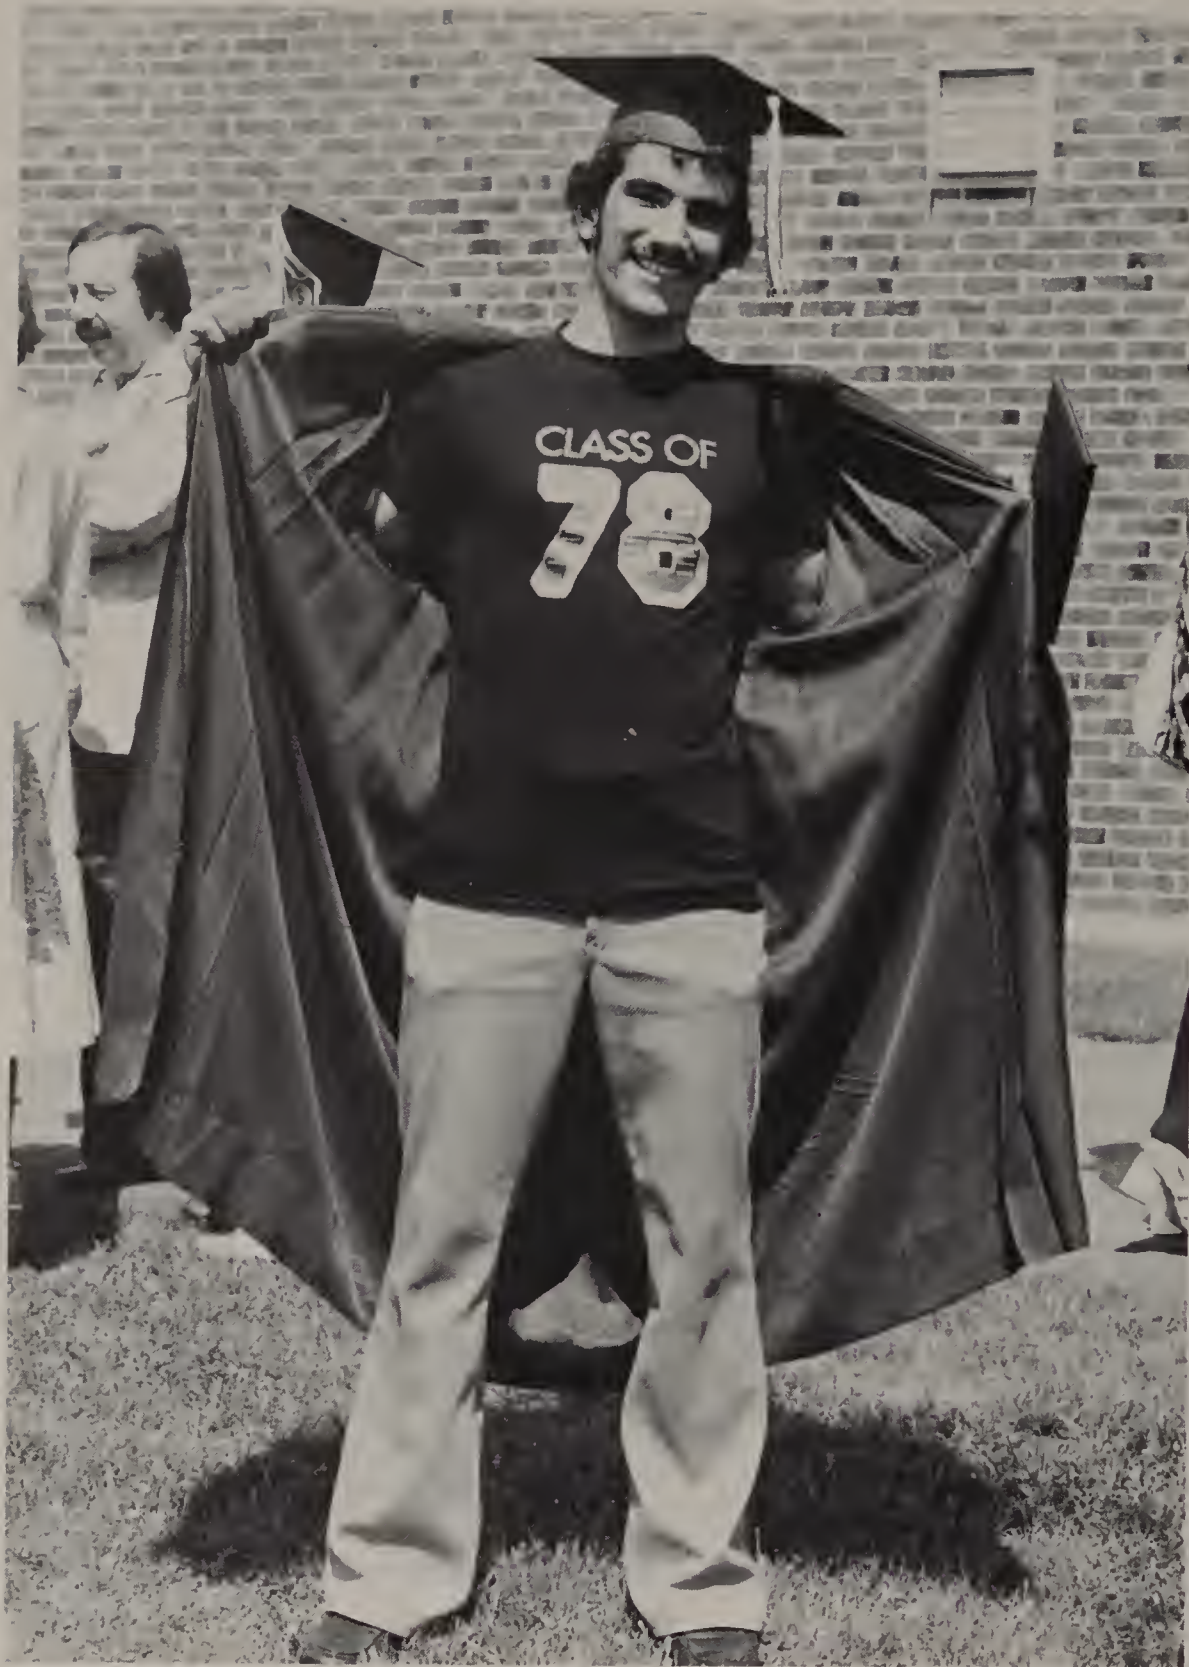

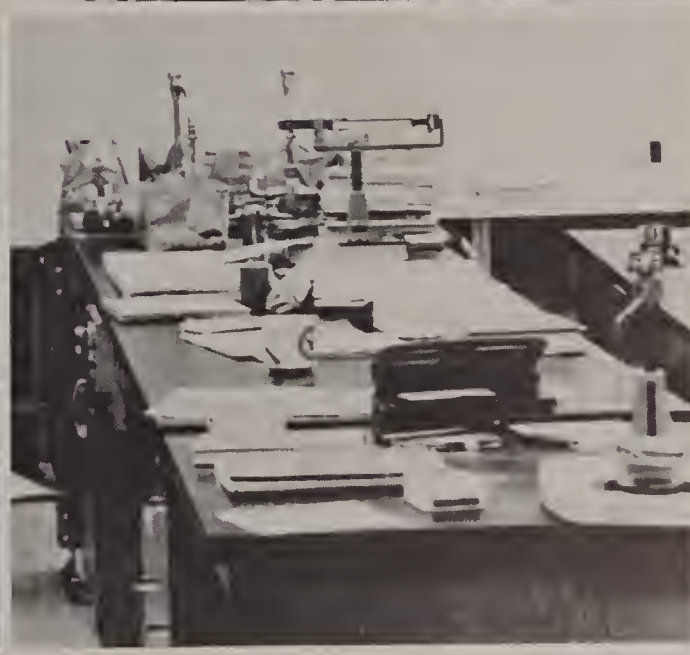

The End Of The Line

That long awaited day (had it really been four years?) finally came. Amid feelings of excitement and disbelief, the Class of 1978 filed across the football field to receive their diplomas. This was the last time we would be together as a class. Elation and sadness produced a feeling of closeness as we congratulated each other and set off to celebrate together.

THE FINAL BELL

The bell has rung
and
First grade has begun.

The tears are shed
and
Friends are made.

Books and buses
and Field trip rides have Moved before our eyes.

The bell has rung
and
High school has begun.

Friends are old,
and
Ever dear,

Cheers are loud
and
Football is here.

Spring has arrived
and
The end is near.

The final bell has rung
and
Our future has just begun.

Single

She took a deep breath and felt the icy cold rush through her lungs. She turned to face the bottom of the incline and sped towards the lift line. As she entered the bull-pen, she began to look around for a nice-looking single. She didn't see anyone alone, and as she approached the end of the line, she gave a weary sigh. She would have to ride to the summit alone again.

Then she heard a clear, strong voice ring out, "Single anyone?" "Right here," she answered excitedly. She took one look at him coming towards her and felt her heart begin to pound.

She stepped to the side and let some people pass her as she waited for him. When he finally caught up with her, she gave him the biggest smile she could manage. He grinned back at her, but did not say a word. They went through the rest of the line in silence. They stepped up to the chair; it came quickly and swept them away.

They rode for a while, neither saying a word. He suddenly started talking about the skiing and the weather. All she could do was nod her head in response. She wanted to talk to him, but her mouth felt dry, and her stomach queasy. He wasn't looking at her, but at the beautiful scenery around them.

She studied him carefully. He was dressed plainly in tan corduroys, a heavy, dark brown sweater, and a down-filled vest. He wore no hat, and his golden hair was a wild mass of curls blowing in the wind. His skin had a deep, rich tan that set off his splendid, sky-blue eyes.

He turned suddenly and saw her staring at him. He smiled again, showing perfect, white teeth. He realized the things she was thinking and laughed to himself. "This kid is something else," he thought. "She can't be much over 13; she sure is ugly. She's short and fat and what dull, brown eyes. She's even got braces."

She smiled at him dreamily, showing her metallic mouth to him. It was all he could do to keep from laughing out loud. He decided to give the kid a thrill, so he put his arm around the back of the chair, pulled up close to her and started talking. He asked her name and age. He asked where she was staying and where she was from, seemingly interested in her. He was very polite to her and he treated her kindly.

She could not believe how sweet he was to her. Even the guys in her class had always laughed at her and teased her. She was so thrilled, she could not say a word.

When they reached the top of the mountain he said, "See you later." She was not going to let him get away so easily, though. His kind words had given her all the confidence in the world. She lost all her shyness in her determination to win him. She skied up beside him and looked at him expectantly.

He glanced down at her and thought, "Oh, God, What did I get myself into? I'll have to lose her." He looked away from her quickly and began his speedy descent down the mountain.

She thought, "He musn't have seen me. I'll follow him."

As she approached the bottom of the hill, she saw him in the lift line again. She hurried to catch him, but when he snapped, "Get the hell out of here, kid," she stopped suddenly, feeling very embarrassed.

She watched him ski ahead to a group of beautiful girls who fell all over him. She was disappointed, and a little upset, but she kept her feelings inside her. She got back into the lift line, this time not even looking for a single.

THE SANDCASTLE

The hot August sun began losing its fierceness as the day quietly slipped by the waves of the blue-green water broke rhythmically and rolled into shore, only to be pulled back and soon lost in the vastness of the ocean. A cool ocean breeze blew over the glistening white sand, which was dotted with a few lingering sunbathers.

Down near the water, a few feet from where the waves could reach him, a small boy sat building a sand castle. His red bathing suit was completely sand-covered and a mass of sticky blond curls framed his innocent face. His tiny hands moved carefully and gently as he delicately molded the outer wall surrounding his castle. He smoothed the wall until eyes shone with satisfaction and then he began putting the finishing touches on the main tower. He delicately sprinkled the last remaining drops of water from his green bucket, sprinkled more sand over the water, and then carefully patted and smoothed the tower.

He had been working on the castle from early morning, determined to build his mother the biggest, most beautiful castle in the world. She would be coming down soon and he was going to surprise her with it.

He earnestly picked up his pail and ran towards the waves to get more water. As he filled the bucket, he looked back at his castle, and a surge of pride flowed through him. His sparkling blue eyes lingered as he threw his shoulders back, picked up the pail, and started walking. The pail was heavy and the water sloshed over the sides as he slowly made his way back. He glanced up to look at his accomplishment one more time and saw a tan, lean body running slowly towards it. He watched as the man moved closer and closer, the castle directly in his path. The man saw the castle and veered to the left, then hesitated, mumbled, "What the hell", and ran towards the castle. His huge left foot sunk through the outer wall, silently crushing the tiny grains of sand which slid down, losing their identity as they mixed with the millions of other glistening particles. His right foot quickly followed flattening the main part of the castle, leaving the sunken impression of his destructful weapon. His left foot surged forward again, this time completely smashing the front tower into a shapeless pile of sand. He continued running without even looking back, not even noticing a small boy whose eyes were filled with tears.

The Doll

The path is barely visible, covered by autumn's spoil. It's direction is made visible only by a stone wall, broken in many places, showing it's crudeness.

In one of the wall's crevices lies a small object, its whiteness accented by the sun. The object appears to be a pile of rags, but on closer inspection a tiny hand, made of plastic, protrudes from the heap. A slight breeze rustles the form and all of a sudden the pile of rags becomes a dress, not completely white, but spotted with tiny pink flowers. The sun disappears and the dress turns gray.

A child, whose dress is made of material similar to that of the doll, pokes among the weeds along the path with a stick as if looking for something. Seeing the doll face down in the rocks, she runs to pick it up. Wiping the mud from its dress, she turns it over to wipe its face.

Clapping her hand over her mouth, she drops the doll and steps backward.

After a few deep breaths, she forces herself to look again at the doll.

The doll's face is cracked, leaving a large gap between its clouded eyes. The tip of its nose is chipped, leaving a white scar.

Picking the doll up by the hem of its dress, the child walks back up the path. She turns off an adjoining path which leads to a small pond, its surface covered with a layer of leaves.

Stepping on a log, half submerged in the water, the child throws a stone to check the water's depth. Then swinging the broken doll by a leg, she stretches to throw it, causing the log to roll.

The child falls sideways into the water's blackness. After a moment the leafy covering stops moving, and the water, seemingly satisfied, is still.

On the shore, the doll lies facing upward, its broken face smiling menacingly.

ON DEATH AND DYING

Enclosed in a tiny room-
the walls, a peeling yellow;
a window letting in a slight breeze.
A chair stands in the corner-
an old chair, brown and wooden.
One perhaps could even get a splinter.
But there was a door.
A tiny woman, white hair and very wrinkled came in and shut the door.
And after a bit, she began to rock never minding the fact the chair didn't even rock with her.
Humming softly to herself, she closed her eyes.

Outside, children laughed and played never once thinking about the limited time.

APRIL

The brown grass of winter is slowly
Going green again
At the edges of the graves.
There are kites over the churchyard
Riding the reckless April wind.
The kids run between the stones.
The dead do not seem to mind;
Perhaps they enjoy the laughter
Of the children in the churchyard
Their eyes fixed on the fragile form.

The string always breaks, always suddenly always sadly always to soon.
Somehow we never expect that it will.

The newly built high school is considerably large. During the day, students are hurrying to their classes, hoping they will reach their destination before the tone sounds. Some students linger aimlessly around the corridors while they talk to their friends. Many of the girls hang around in the girls' room and some couples display their affections in the corners of the hall. Between classes there are wall to wall kids, but during classes, the corridors are practically empty. The corridor walls usually have activities posted for a later date. The upstairs corridor has long rows of multi-colored lockers.

When the school day has finished, the corridors are dim and soundless. Hardly anyone is around - the band is not playing, the gym is not occupied by any players, and lockers are not being slammed. It is very strange to walk by a class and not seeing anyone in the room. The school really seems incomplete; the very life of the building is missing.

It is late in the day and the hallway is empty. Standing in front of a wide, open door is a tall, rugged guy. Beside him is a small, sensitive-looking girl. The guy is explaining his feelings to the girl as she tries to understand every word that he is saying. The expression on the girl's face and the tears in her eyes showed the hurt that she was feeling. "I'm beginning to look at our situation differently. We should be experiencing new things." Suddenly he stopped talking. She nodded her head, as she said "I know what you mean," the tears began to trickle down the side of her face. As the two of them walked beside each other toward the distant exit, the corridor never seemed so long before.

Where to Now?

It was never really my habit to eavesdrop, but seeing that she was a co-worker, I couldn't resist. I was working on the switchboard that night, which gave me perfect access to any conversation that was going on in my boss's office. Well, Sue was sitting in Armand's (my boss) office. She looked as though she would have a nervous breakdown. She was meak as a mouse, hardly ever spoke a word, which made it even more surprising that she was sitting there. The door was open, and I could smell a stench, he always smoked cheap cigars. His piercing black eyes seemed to go right through Sue's head as he talked. Slowly his voice got louder, as his face got redder, you could just tell that she was in trouble. Sue never lifted her head to look at him. But then, with no warning, Armand slammed his fist on his desk and stood up. Sue jerked up her head and she quickly stood up. As she turned to leave his office, I noticed a tear trickling down her cheek. Poor Sue, she looked the same as everyone did when they left that seat, the seat of approaching unemployment.

Frustration

He saw her come into the library and sit down at a nearby table. "Oh great. Just what I need today, the class genius showing off her scholastic talent." She opened her textbook and began to read. As she read, she curled a lock of her hair around her finger. He watched her for a minute, then tried to go back to his work. The questions these textbooks asked got harder and harder each week. The rustle of paper broke his train of thought. She had pulled a piece of paper from her notebook and had begun to write rapidly. He closed his eyes and tried to pull his thoughts back together again. The scratching of her pencil on the paper wormed its way through his thoughts and began to irritate him. "Why is she ALWAYS able to do this work? I can never make heads or tails of it." The longer he tried to concentrate on his work, the more frustrated and angry he became. He scowled down at his paper and took such a violent grip on his pen that he almost choked the life out of it. Once again he tried to get back to work.

After thirty minutes of diligent work, he was able to complete five questions of the assignment. He felt that he had accomplished a great task and he was proud of it. He looked over at the girl and saw that she had finished that assignment and was already half-way through another. The feeling of accomplishment faded much more quickly than it had come. He felt the consuming rage well up in him again. He fought an urge to throw his books on the floor. Instead he took hold of both ends of his pencil and, with violent precision, snapped it in two. She looked up at the sound and glanced over at him. Those eyes, full of hatred, burned into her own and she was suddenly afraid. She could almost sense his thoughts of frustration and anger. "Damn you," he thought. "Why do you love to make me feel like an inferior person; like something less than nothing?"

She turned quickly back to her work and, hurriedly scrawling the answer to the last question, got ready to leave. She gathered all her things and left the table. As she walked past him towards the door, she felt his eyes bore into her back and she quickened her steps.

When she had gone, his anger suddenly reached its high point and, like a fever, it broke. He felt that to complete his work would be futile. He shoved his books away from him. As he did so, his eye fell on the paper in front of him. With one quick motion he crumpled it into a ball.

Between The Goalposts

The Varsity football squad had a disappointing season, but there were a few bright spots. The team, led by Head Coach Joseph Santos finished the season with a 3-7 record, but in the last half of the season, the team won three out of five games played.

In the first game of the season, the football team lost to Warren, 29-16. The team then went on to lose the next four games; to Coyle-Cassidy 20-0, Fairhaven 33-14, Seekonk 8-0, and finally Bishop Stang 21-6. With the first half of the season complete and the team winless, Coach Santos changed the game plan, and the team reacted by beating Barnstable 12-7. The team then lost a tight one to Bishop Feehan 20-16, but defeated Bourne 20-8 and new Bedford Voke 20-0. In the traditional Thanksgiving Day game against rivals Somerset High School, the team was stopped cold and lost 28-6.

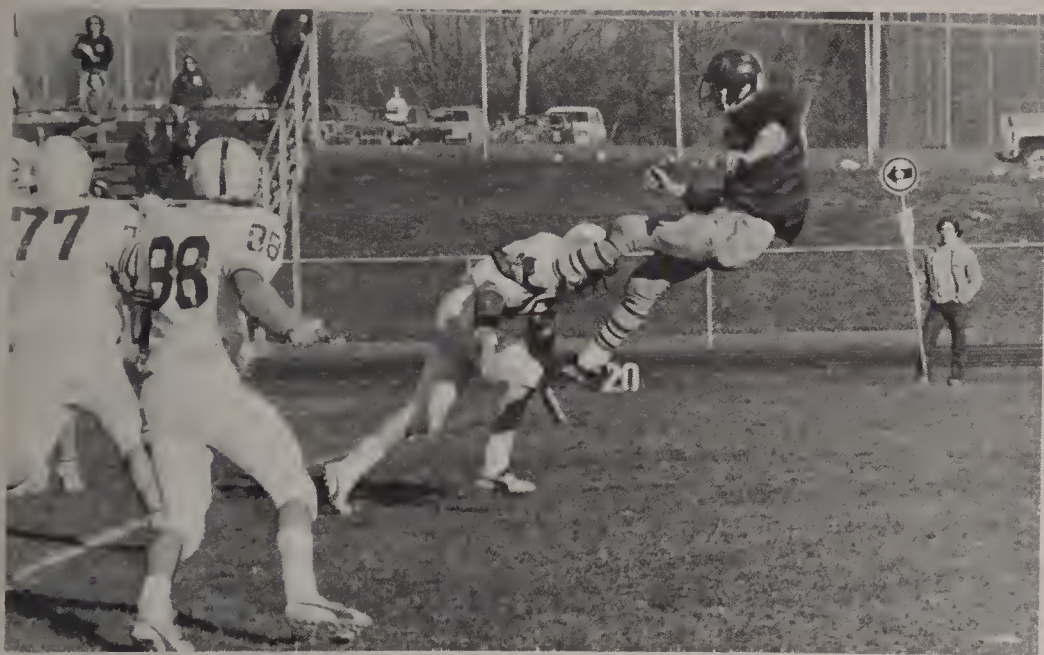

Despite the team's overall Performance, Case was gifted with many fine senior athletes. Team Captain Jeff Pollard, Mickey Aroujo, Mike Berube, Peter DeCosta, Jim Hall, Jim Figuerado, Bart Hibbert, Kevin McCarthy, Alan Medeiros, Peter Patota, Mike Prendergast, and Paul Rodrigues are the twelve seniors who saw their last Thanksgiving Day game. The Most Valuable Player award was given to Jim Hall.

CASE HIGH FOOTBALL TEAM — 1977

Long-Distance Running

Despite the Cross Country team's record of 0-9, individual performances by Todd Rousseau, Team Captain John Hargraves, and Dana Cross were spectacular. In a team consisting mostly of juniors and sophomores, Todd Rousseau's leadership and veteran experience added greatly to the team's morale and determination. Being the only senior on the squad, Todd symbolized "the lonely runner". Todd never missed a meet and was always placed first or second on the Case team. Captain John Hargraves won the Most Valuable Player award for his outstanding running ability and also his loyalty and dedication to the team. The other runners who made up the team are juniors: Don Flynn, Morris Merrithew and sophomores: Dana Cross, Roddy Geldart, John Couture, Dan Rose, John Boisvert, and freshmen: Jeff MacMahon and Donna Dias.

In the team's first meet of the season, they lost to Bristol-Plymouth 45-15. From that point onward the rest of the season went sour. The team took five clear-cut losses. Bourne defeated them 40-15, Diman won 48-20, Feehan beat them 98-55, Wareham defeated them 126-45, and the team was beaten by Connolly 166-110. The team followed by losing in very close games. The first to Bishop Stang 32-23, and the second to Westport 28-27. In the final game of the season the team lost to Dighton-Rehobeth 45-15. In the conference meet Todd Rousseau finished 28th, John Boisvert placed 34th Roddy Geldart 35th, Dana Cross 39th, John Hargraves 40th, and Don Flynn came in 42nd place.

Bottom right: T. Rousseau, D. Rose, D. Dias, J. McMahon, R. Goldart, T. Fitzgerald, D. Flynn, J. Couture, J. Boisvert, D. Cross, J. Hargraves, Mr. Demary.

Driving Around

The field hockey team did quite well this year. The Varsity squad, led by senior Dot Mello, ended up third in their division with a season record of two wins, three losses, and two ties.

Junior Varsity Captain Donna Mohler did equally well with her team. The J.V. record was one win, three losses and two ties.

Case's defense this year was strong. Both wins were shutouts. Goalie Gisele Petit made some nice saves in the net, and the rest of the team did their part with spirit.

Offense was also impressive, with most goals scored by Debra Levesque. It's a lot of work just to run up and down the field the way they do!

Three members of the team were elected for the All-Star team. They were Debra Levesque (center), Siobhan Kelly (center halfback), and Susan Levesque (alternate).

Spike It!

This year the Case volleyball team looked stronger than it has in the past. This is probably due to the fact that most of the Varsity squad has had at least one year's experience behind them.

The girls expressed a great desire to win, and this determination, along with polished skills, led them to some fine victories. Long hours of practice helped to perfect these skills. Serving and spiking were especially stressed by Coach Stanton. The bump, set, spike technique was drilled into the girls until it became almost mechanical.

Varsity was led all the way by Captain Renee Daniello, who showed her team how to keep pushing even after some disappointing losses. Their final season record is four wins, six losses.

The J.V. team ended up with a slightly better record than Varsity (six wins, four losses). Experienced Captains Cindy Cooper and Kelly Richmond showed their young teammates the skills needed for a good team. The Varsity squad now has some bright prospects to look forward to. Many seniors have been lost, so Case will be depending on the J.V. squad.

Tumblin' . . .

The success of Coach Stanton's gymnastics team was primarily due to the many experienced members of the team. Their record of five wins, two losses testifies to this. Seniors Donna Doane and Robin Hodgkinson were valuable assets during the meets. The award for Most Valuable Player was awarded to Katie Murphy, a junior.

Pucking Around

The Ice hockey team ended the season with a record of three wins, thirteen losses, and one tie. Head Coach Ken Fonseca wasn't too dissatisfied with the team's performance. The team was made up of many veteran members whose talents were considerable. Mike Freeman, the team's goaltender, was chosen as the Most Valuable Player on the team and was elected to the Southeastern Massachusetts hockey team.

Shooting Stars

The Varsity basketball team finished with a 4-16 record, but more important than the team's success was the success of center Jim Hall. Jim was this year's Most Valuable Player and he hit a scoring plateau with a career high of 1000 points. Jim ended the season having the second highest career total points in the school's history. Jim was also elected to the S.E.M. All-Star basketball team.

The second biggest happening in basketball was the new coach, Mr. Fran Kelly. Coach Kelly replaced Mr. Robert Gordon, and although the record was impressive, Mr. Kelly has a lot to look forward to in the future.

The seniors who will be leaving the squad include forward Paul Rodrigues whose job was to handle the opponents' top scorer. Jim Figuerado was superb in the forward position as his strength underneath the boards was unsurpassed. Mickey Araujo played the guard position and was one of the most underrated players. His speed and excellent shooting ability made him a prime starter. Though Ray Bonosconi wasn't a standout, he never missed a game, and his dedication to the team was rewarding to him and the team.

Top: Mark Gagnon and Jim Hall demonstrate varied styles of shooting a basket. Left: Fancy footwork takes Mickey Araujo down the court for a basket.

Behind The Goal Line

It was a dissappointing season for the girl's basketball team. The team's record was one win, thirteen losses despite many talented players. The teams youth undoubtedly had something to do with this. Co-captains Colleen Lafferty and Colleen Webb were the only seniors on the squad. Letter winners were: Colleen Lafferty, Colleen Webb, Debbie Nunes, Trisha Rose, Cheryl Duclos, Charlene Durand, Shirley Nunes, Gisele Petit and Donna Ryalls.

Hitting The Top

The boy's Varsity baseball team, coached by Robert Gorden did better than expected and ended up with an 18-2 overall record. The team was one of the top in the state, and in the S.E.M. tournament they defeated Hull by a score of 14-3 and lost their second tournament game to Brighton 4-1.

The main reason for the team's success was the fine pitching of John Pobzezniak, Ronnie Hedge, and M.V.P. award-winner Paul Rodrigues.

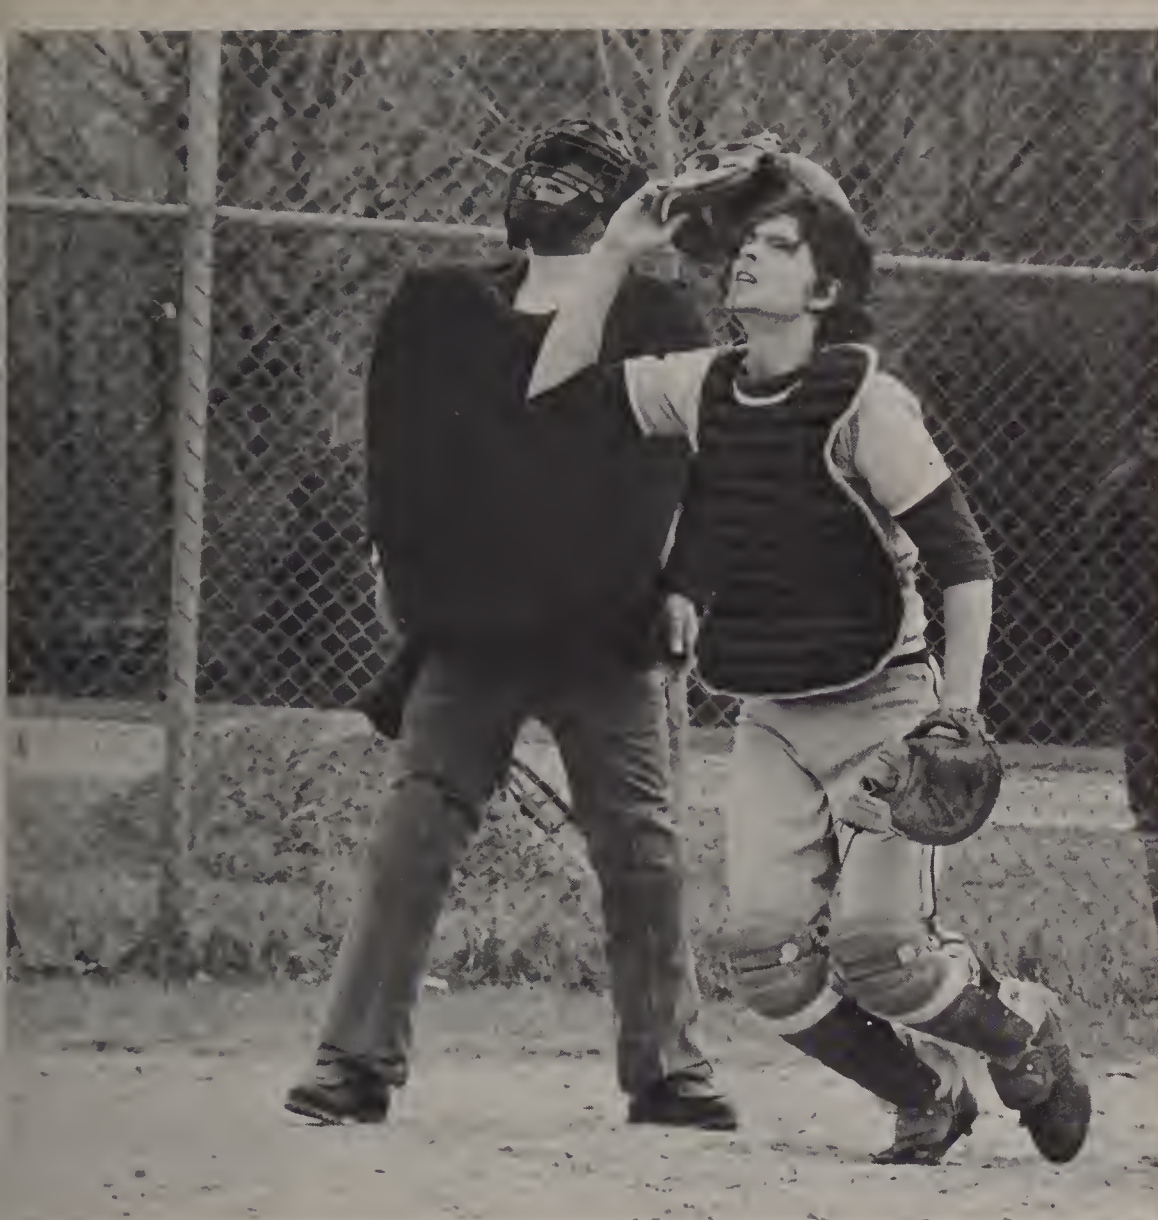

In the field was the dynamic combination of Jim Figuerado at first base, Billy Martin and David Stansfield at second base, Paul Gagnon as shortstop, John Pobzezniak at third, and Mike Pavao and Don Flynn catching.

The outfield contained Paul Rodrigues, Mike Prendergast, Ronnie Hedge, Jeff Pollard, and Rick Mello.

The club's hitting was even better than the pitching. Paul Rodrigues hit over .400, while the rest of the team hit .250 or better.

It was a sensational baseball team.

Girl Sluggers Go Undefeated

The Case girl's softball team went all the way to the top this year. Unfortunately, they were defeated in their first tournament game against Canton, with a score of 7-5.

Even so, the girls can be credited with an outstanding season, as they went undefeated and became the first Case softball team to go to the tournament.

The most important victory of the season came with the second match-up against Somerset. Without too much difficulty, Case bumped Somerset down a notch and held on to first place and a chance at the championship.

Siobhan Kelly led the team all the way with some outstanding performances on the mound. This season she reached her goal of over 100 strikeouts.

Her battery mate Colleen Chase became Case's strongest and most consistent hitter. her defense behind the plate was invaluable.

The rest of the defense was just as strong. With Colleen Webb, Debbie Nunes, Lisa Pontes and Gisele Petit, very few hits got past the infield, and if they did, some strong arms were right behind them.

Offensively, Case produced power as well as finesse. Slugger Colleen Chase hit a grand slam as well as the team's first homerun. Colleen Webb and Debbie Nunes had some key hits in clutch situations. Batting averages ranged from .350 to .550. It's no wonder some scores were as incredible as 11-0.

The spirit of the team cannot go unnoticed. Each game, the starters were cheered on by their bench. This could be the reason why Case kept pushing forward to a remarkable season. Case has gained a fine reputation with other teams for their spirit.

Renee Daniello, team captain, Colleen Webb and Judy Eddy will be sorely missed next year and Coach Stanton must fill the holes. These girls showed leadership as well as individual talent.

Tennis, Anyone

The tennis team, coached by Russ Noble finished surprisingly well in their conference with a record of seven wins, nine losses. Team captain and first singles player Lori Holmes was elected the Most Valuable Player of the Team. Lori Holmes, Peter Burrell, and Alan Abdallah are the three seniors on the team. The other members includee Morris Merrithew, Mike Farias, Trisha Rose, Mark Stiles, and Russell Gonzalves, who were the starters on the team.

Running On Empty

This year's boy's track team had a very disappointing season. The team had much talent and excellent coaching in Head Coach Joseph Santos and Assistant Coach Henry Chapman, but the teams record is no reflection of this fact. Tri-captains Pete Patota, Rick Lavoie and Mike Berube helped the team greatly, mentally and physically.

Although the girl's track team compiled only three victories this year, many school records were broken.

Katie Murphy received a total of 156.33 points and broke records in the long jump, the 100 yard dash, and the 220. She was selected as the team's most valuable player.

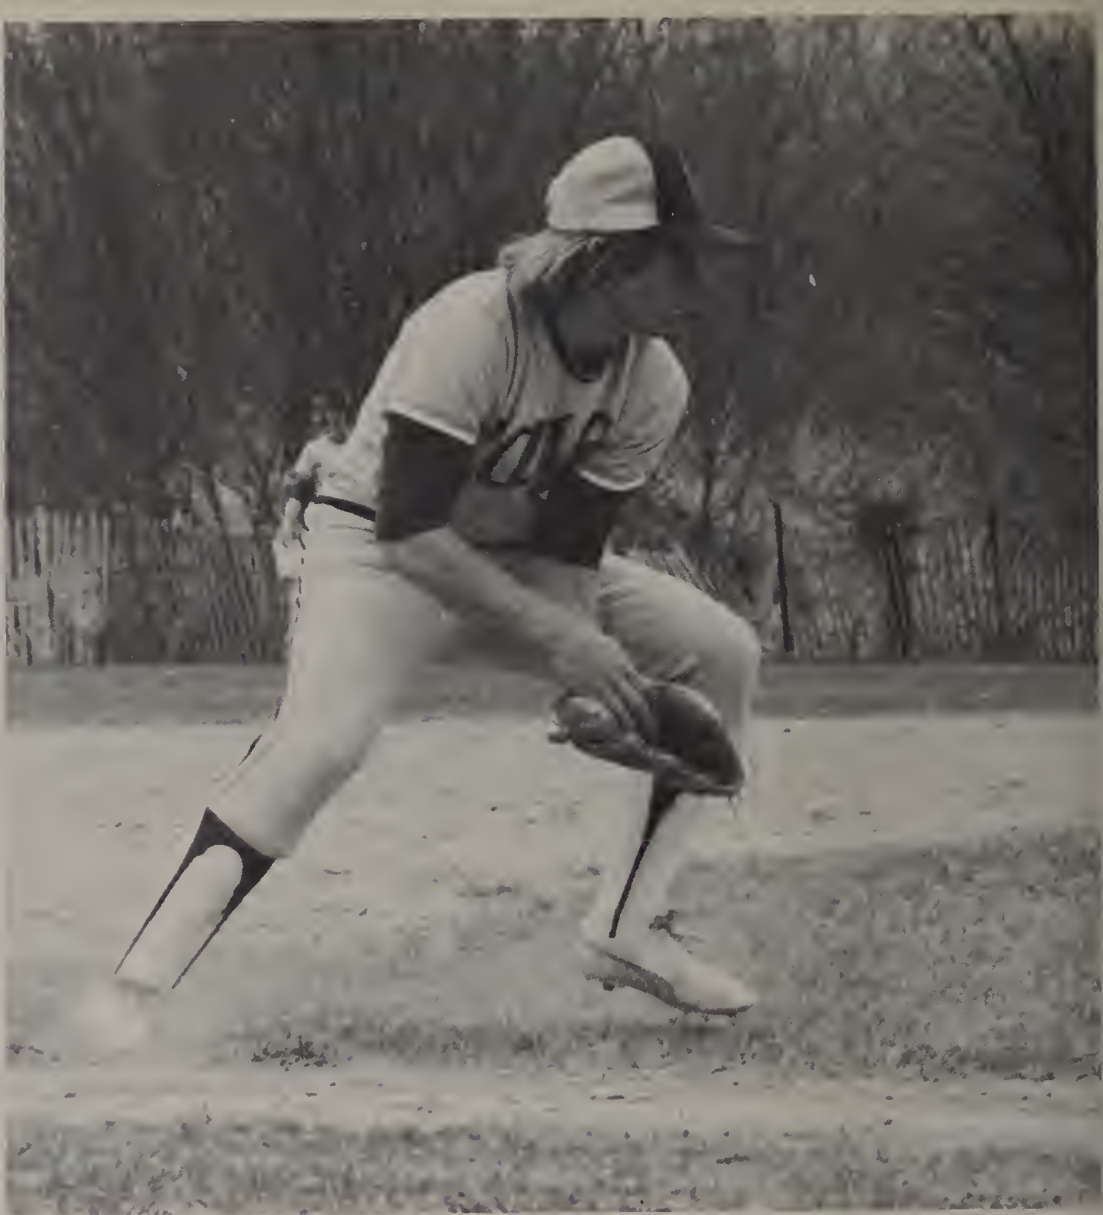

Hopefully, the girls can put it together earlier in the season next year. (Their three wins came in the last of their meets) Cold weather and wet track conditions may have hampered some promising performances.
